Juicy Jewels

A walk in the woods can be a perfect opportunity for a quick snack. Only certain plants are safe to eat, so make sure you know what the plant is before trying anything. In the summer lots of edible plants produce berries. Sapphire spheres droop from blueberry bushes. Knobby purple berries hang from mulberry trees and grow on the ground from blackberry vines. Serviceberries grow clusters of tiny globes that glow from red to midnight blue. Even tiny wild strawberries hide among the grass.
